

Protingent Staffing Subsidizes Transit Passes for Employees

Redmond, Washington, November 23, 2007 – Protingent Staffing announced today that it will subsidize half the cost of transit passes for employees and contractors on assignment at client companies. The other half will be covered by a pre-tax payroll deduction.

The staffing company believes the transit subsidy program addresses two important issues of personal and global concern; rising gas prices which are taking a bigger proportion of commuters' paychecks, and climate change which is being affected by carbon emissions. "This is our way of helping employees support our clients with a reduced environmental impact," said Donn Harvey, president of Protingent.

This is a benefit available to all employees and contractors. Protingent makes it easy for employees to review transit options, and then enroll in the program. Staff members at Protingent's Redmond office said they were looking forward to getting out of congested traffic and that the Pre-Tax Commuter Benefit program "makes a lot of sense."

One of "Washington's Best Workplaces" according to Puget Sound Business Journal, Protingent Staffing specializes in providing IT and product development engineers to businesses throughout the country.
